MILLER MEN TO THE FORE.

LICANS OF THE STATE. Conferences All Day Yesterday-Br. Be-

pow, Collector Erhardt, and Hamilton Pick Wore There-Mr. Platt Not Invited -Can They Got the State Committee !-We Maken Them Wesses to the Job of Trying to Elect a Republican Covernor.

Two weeks ago this morning THE SUN told of a movement begun by ex-Senator Warner Miller and his friends in the Republican party of the State to bring about some sort of a reorganization of the party, smarting under the since then has been deluged with letters to the friends of Mr. Miller, asking them to come to New York and in formal conference adopt a manifesto which would set forth the ideas of the Miller wing of the party.

On Saturday night and all day yesterday the hayseed Republican advocates of Millerism were arriving, bag and beggage, at the Windsor Hotel. Mr. Miller himself can scarcely be considered any longer a hayseeder, for he lives at the Union League Club the year round, and Herkimer, his pet stamping ground of former years, sees him only ensionally, usually on Sunday, when he runs up to see his folks. In a sense, therefore, he must be set down as a New York city man. He and Chauncey M. Depew and Collector Erhardt were the only city folks present at the conferences of Mr. on Saturday night and were prolonged all day once room, which was on the main floor of Congressman Belden's hotel, were the Congressman bimself, ex-Congressman Henry G. Utica, James S. Smart of Washington, Assemblyman Hamilton Fish of Putnam, Senator John Laffin of Buffalo, Congressman-elect Lealie W. Russell of Canton, Senator George B. Bloau of Oswego, Benjamin Flagler and James B. Lowe of Suspension Bridge, ex-Congressman George West, the Beauty from Ballston; ex-Senator James Arkell of Herkimer, John W. Vicoman of Little Falls, Senator Titus Sheard of Matteawas, Assemblyman William H. Mase, who crept in this time by three votes; ex-Senator I. V. Baker of Comstocks. Gen. James Wadsworth. Congressman-elect from Genesco; Congressman John Sanford and James Wadsworth. Congressman-elect from Genesco: Congressman John Sanford and John Kellogg of Amsterdam, and George N. Southwick from Albany.

All Saturday night and all day yesterday the plans of the contemplated crusade ngainst the Platt wing of the party were discussed. It was very evident from the discussion that the first step to be taken was to be an effort to secure the election of Miller delegates to the next Republican State Convention. This convention will not be held until next August or September, but the idea was to begin work right off all over the State and in this city to secure delegates who will at the next convention have the power to appoint a new State Committee.

The present committee is controlled by Mr. Platt's friends. If the Miller people get control of the State Convention they will, of course, blight the hopes of Senator Fassett as a Gubernatorial candidate. The Miller people are not partial to Mr. Fassett, because of his close relations with Mr. Platt. Just who will be the candidate of the Miller people if they get the upper hand is pot known, but it was said yesterday that the friends of Mr. Miller would insist on his making the race again. This thought was simply gossip, as the conferrees atyesterday that the friends any other ambition than to bring the Republican party of the State out of the quicksands in which it is now floundering, and also to bring about a reorganization that will present something like a solid iront at the next National Convention. Incidentally, if the Miller wing wins and recaptures the Logislature and keepe it. Senator Hiscock will be retired to make room for Mr. Beiden.

As a result of the prolonged deliberations it was decided to issue a manifesto to the fierublicans of the State and New York city, which contains Mr. Miller's views of what ought to be done.

Ex-Senator Platt and his friends at the Fifth Avanue Hotel seemed to be fully aware of contains Mr. Miller's views of what ought to be done.

Ex-Senator Platt and his friends at the Fifth Arenue Hotel seemed to be fully aware of what was going on at the Windsor. Mr. Platt would not discuss the situation. He expressed the utmost indifference, and his friends appeared to be almost poyous that Mr. Miller and his friends were about to assume the responsibility of electing a Republican Governor in the solidity Democratic Empire State.

It was learned that at the coming session in Albany all Republicans will pledge themselves in caucus to vote for the reflection of Senator Evarts.

About 8.000 canaries arrived at Hoboken yesterday on the steamship Trave. None of the little travellers are much more than half a year old, and a majority of them will probaing a permanent abiding place. These 8,000 canaries first saw the light in Harzburg. many, where thousands and thousands of them are raised every year and sent to all parts of the civilized world.

Each bird, when shipped at Southampton on the Trave, was placed in a little house of its own. The small cases were arranged in iters and rows, and from 200 to 400 placed inside a large case, which hold the little cases secure and belped to prevent them from being shaken about by the motion of the vessel. These large cases were pisced on the lower deck of the steamer, just below the steerage quarters, close up to the sides of the belier rooms. Thus the birds were kept warm during the journey, and had plenty of pure air and light through the ventilators. The birds did not seem to be affected by the sea journey in the least. They are heartily, and kept up a continual chirping and singing all day long. The passengers visited the birds every day.

Considering the number, and this is said to be the largest single consignment of canaries ever sent to this country, the death rate was remarkably small. The purser thought that only about six died, but it was learned from other sources that this is probably too low an estimate. Forty or fifty is undoubtedly more correct. Every morning six men supplied the birds with pure water and seed. Nearly 8.000 quarts of seed were consumed in the ten days passage. The canaries were consigned to Louis Ruhe of 24 North William street.

Besides the 8.000 canuries on the Trave there were several animals, said to be destined for the Central Park Menagerie. Among them were one lion, two Sumatra tigers, one hyens, two antelopes, one emu, two box constrictors, and cight ostriches. All shood the journet well with the exception of the lion. The king of besatts succumbed to the rolling of the sea and was frightly seasick for two days, relusing to eat a morsal of foot. When he recovered he made up for this abstinence. own. ### Shot Bond in Front of His House

SALEM, Mass., Dec. 14.—James Lane was shot dead on the sidewalk in front of his house just before midnight last night by a man named Callaghan of Jeabody. Callaghan and Charles Chute of Lynnfield Centre had been in the house, but had come out and got into their wagon. The shooting is believed to be the rewagon. The shooting is believed to be the result of a row begun in the house. Lane was abyoars old and had a wife and family. He was a masou's lender. After the shooting callaghan jumped from the team and rau. Chute was taken into custody. He refuses to say a word, when asked where the revolver was, he denie is all knowledge of it, but afterward it was found raited up in the robe. It was a 25-culibre, with three chambers discharged. Lane was shot in the back of the neck and fell dead instantly. Callaghan has not been found. All of the party were more or less under the influence of liquor.

The Contest Over Mayor Perry's Will. MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 14 .- J. T. Perry, Mayor of Greenville. Ala., died suddenly about two years ago, leaving an estate valued at $90,000 to his bookkeeper. J. M. Carroll, and to the children of his sister. Mrs. Rothenhoffer. to the children of his sister. Mrs. Bothenhoffer. Another sister, Mrs. Fallmore, living in Arkansas, began proceedings contesting the will, alleging twenty charges of illegality, fraud, and forsery. The trial in the United Sistes Circuit Court lasted twelve days, during which time the attorney for the contestant consumed six days in tearing the will and codicit to nieces. The decision was rendered yesterday sustaining the will. The contestant's attorneyftook many exceptions during the progress of the irial, and it is proliable that the case will be appealed to the United Sixtes Supreme Court.

NORWICH STIBERD UP. Dr. Leonard W. Sacon Makes a Scathing Attack on the Morals of Sis Town.

Norwicz, Conn., Dec. 14.—The Rev. Dr. Leonard W. Bacon preached his second sernon on the theatre in his stone Congregational mon on the theatre in his stone Congregational Church on the Hill this evening. He followed the line of his first address at fust: then, with the alleged obscene shows that have lately appeared in the new house here tors rest, he plunged into the most scathing attack on the morals politics, social life, and lack of moral convictions of the people of Norwich that was ever heard in a New England politic. Influential citizens, press, and everything else came in for a share of the preacher's flery denunciation. The ostensible object of the arraignment was to sting the people into a resolution to refuse to attend all shows of an alleged immoral character. Almost every sentence produced a sensation in the densely packed audience.

THE SER, MORDAY, DECEMBER IS, 1889 A FINANCIAL FORECAST.

> It is so easy to be wise after the event, and so hard to forecast it rightly, that, in common with most other people, I very much prefer discussing things which have taken place, and enunciating general maxime concerning them. to committing myself to prophecies which may not be fulfilled. Still, just now the outlook seems so plain to me that I am willing to depart from my usual caution, and to respond to the inquiries of my friends for my opinion as to what is likely to follow the existing condition of financial affairs. They say, justly, "Anybody can tell us what happened yesterday: what we want is somebody to tell us what is going to happen to-day and to-morrow."
> I cannot undertake to be so precise as this, but unless all past experience is worthless, and unless no dependence can be placed upon the permanence of the laws which govern human conduct, I will venture to guess that the centre of the financial cyclone has passed by, and that we shall soon have clearing weather.

> This does not mean an immediate restora tion of the foolbardy confidence which pre-valled before the crisis commenced, and a revival of speculation in fancy stocks, nor does it mean that there will be no more failures, and no more revelations of weak spots in the business system. What it does mean is a cessation of the apprehensiveness which has lately prevalled in regard to everything, a loosening of the purse strings by capitalists, a better estimate of sound investments, a lower rate of in-terest for money, and, consequently, a rise in the prices of all good interest and dividend paying securities. These results will not come immediately, but that they will come before next summer, I am confident, and, while it may take a longer time to set orippied concerns on their legs, and while there will be a good many more business funerals, the healthy survivors of the crisis will, in a few months, have entirely passed through it.

As I pointed out three weeks ago, the prevailing trouble in the business world has grown out of the propensity of the human mind to speculation and to gambling, fostered and stimulated by a long season of business prosperity. Success begot, first confidence and then temerity. Enterprises which resulted profitably, because they deserved it, led to others which did not deserve it, but which, in the pervading atmosphere of enthusiasm, put on a delusive appearance of merit. Borrowing was easy, because lenders were all hopeful, and thus was reared a huge fabric of promises to pay, which, in the nature of things, it would be impossible to fulfil, if their fulfilment should be insisted on. Finally it was insisted on, and then the crash followed. Money, as it was called, became scarce; that is, lenders became alarmed and reduced the volume of credits, which had been doing duty for money, so that borrowers found it difficult to renew their loans. This forced the selling of securities and these, viewed in the new and clearer light that had dawned upon the public mind, ceased to look so valuable as they previously did, and the consequences I need not recapitulate.

It will be observed that I view the trouble as entirely mental, and do not ascribe it in the least to external agencies, such as those which have played an important part in previous cases of the same kind. The panic of 1837 and the following years was precipitated and intensified by the destruction of property in the great fire in this city of 1835, and by a succession of bad harvests which compelled us to import food from Europe. That of 1880 was caused by the breaking out of the rebellion of the Southern States, while the stringency which prevailed from 1873 to 1879 was due to the preparations for a return to specie payments, and to the general fall in prices which was expected to result from that measure. The present situation seems to me to be nearly the same as that of 1857, and as we recovered quickly then, so we shall now, and for a similar reason.

Human nature is so constituted that it cannot bear a long continuance of any violent passion or emotion. It becomes weary of it and demands a change, either to a state of repose or to one of a different form of excitement. "A blazing fire does not last." As we have seen, the hopeful outhustasm which marked all business operations just previous to the present crisis gave place to general distrust and alarm. From undue elation people passed to an opposite extreme of depression. This depression of feeling will, in turn, wear itself out, except in the individual cases in which it has a real and permanent cause, and a more cheerful tone will succeed it. We are beginning already to see symptoms of this improvement, and they will. I think, become more marked every day from now on.

The business of the world is kept going by the demand for the commodities needed for daily life; it is expanded and stimulated by the desire of investing the excess of the products of industry over this daily demand in ways which will yield profitable returns. When there is no such excess, or where it is small. there can be no enterprise; where it is large. as it is in this country and in Europe, the ingenuity of its owners is constantly at work to invent means for making it in turn productive. New railroads, steamboats, factories, mines, and farm improvements are no more nor less than new forms of the surplus of food, clothing, and implements created over the amount consumed in keeping mankind alive and in health. In our case, the production of this surplus has not been arrested and it is as large as ever. diversion into unprofitable schemes has indeed, been stopped, and for a time a great deal of caution will be exercised in employing it. Hence, there will be a demand only for investments already proved to be remunerative, and these will advance in price until their holders are tempted to part with them and relavest the proceeds in other forms, not so highly auproved by the public, but which, in their judgment are equally safe and intrinsically more valuable. Thus will begin again the era of speculation, to be followed by another crash, and so on, da copo, as the musicians say.

I have lived through a good many of these financial flurries, and the course of all of them has been pretty nearly the same. After the first shock of the culminating crash comes a period of dulness and inactivity. Everybody sits still, holds on to his money, and waits to see what will happen next. I'retty soon the more restless souls get tired of thus doing nothing and venture to act. Their example is followed by their less adventurous fellow citisens, and, finally, a brisk competition sets in for safe and productive securities which carries their prices up. The abundance of capital sceking investment lowers the rate of in-terest, and this in turn helps put up prices still higher. In the present juneture, therefore, I look for a gradually rising market and an increasing ease of money until New Year's, and after that a still more rapid improvement, until. in March and April, the Stock Exchange will be boiling, just as it was in March and April, 1858, following the panic of 1857. Colucident with this process there will be a winnowing over credit leading to the abandonment of those that fail to promise success and to the more or less speedy completion of the rest.

A possible hindrance to the fulfilment of my programme may arise from the action of Con-gress. As Horace Greeley used to say, "White man is mighty onsartin," and what our law-makers at Washington will do no fellow at this moment can tell. On the whole, I believe that any measures which they are likely to adopt will stimulate rather than retard the recuperation I look for. They are pretty sure to take steps for increasing the currency rather than for contracting it, and any increase will help to revive confidence in the future and to put up prices. It is possible that the fear of the estab-lishment of the silver standard, and of a consequent premium on gold, may lead to a hoarding of gold, and some of my friends tell me that it has already begun. Such hearding, if it were extensive, would temporarily contract the curreney and thus prolong the stringeney irom which we have been suffering, but, as yet I observe no signs of it. The idea, too, which I have seen expressed in print, that as soon as the passage of a tree sliver coinage bill becomes ties will be sent over here to be sold for gold and thus produce a renewed panto, does not seem to me to be worth serious consideration. A very small quantity of such securities, forced on our market for immediate sale, would depress their price to a point at which the loss on them, even if they were paid for in gold, would e more than the profit on the gold. But they would not be paid for in gold. if gold went to a premium, as it surely would. The buyers would give cheeks on the banks, and the banks would undoubtedly exercise their legal option o pay the checks in silver or in legal tenders. The legal tenders, being likewise payable in silver, would not be redeemed in gold, and so the whole scheme would fail. The effect of a ransition to the silver standard would be, as I have again and again pointed out, like the effect of the depreciation of the greenbacks during the war. It would raise prices, and thus lead to a bull speculation in everything but debts payable in currency.

All these remarks are intended not for speculators on margins, nor for those who desire only to make quick turns. They are for people who have real money to invest, and who hold securities which they have paid for without borrowing. To such people a delay of a few weeks or even of a few months in the fulliment of my predictions will do no harm, and I sincerely hope that a careful consideration of the grounds upon which I base them will do MATTHEW MARSHALL

BRHWERS GROW WRABY. They Will Advance so More Money to Chi-CHTCAGO, Dec. 14.-It is announced that all the sydicate breweries of the city have decided for the purpose of procuring licenses, and the their doors the first of the year. Many of the breweries have for several years been in the habit of doing even more than advancing the money. They have relieved the saloon keeper of all trouble in the matter, and have seas their agents to the City Hail and had them produce the license for the customer and take it around to him. One or two breweries have gone further. They have paid the free lunch counter expenses of some of their customers. This was all done to keep the brewers stansout, and the burden has been heavy, each incense cesting $500 per year.

Most of the saloons which will be closed are on the outskirts of the city, but there are number of down-town resolts that will also passout of existence. Not only have the brewers grown weary of advancing money for the purpose named, but the largest measure of complaint comes from those saloon keapers who have been able to make both ends meet. They say that it is not fair for brewers to give the man who asks the advance a better chance than the man who pays eash. There are now 5,600 saloons in the city, and the number, it is believed, will be reduced to 4,000 next year. broweries have for several years been in the

Trouble Among Alaskan Travellers. SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 14 -- A private letter that the Frank Leslie exploring expedition to Alaska had serious trouble in camp in the Alaska had serious trouble in camp in the mountains in the interior of the territory. What the trouble was about is not known, but it is said that the explorers quarrolled and divided into three parties. Glare started for New York in disgust. Wells and a band of natives pushed onward into the interior, and at last accounts were snowed in for the winter, with but forty pounds of sour in their camp. The others of the expedition took another direction, striking overland for southeastern Alaska.

Freight Trains Collide.

WILCOX, Pa., Dec. 14.-One of the worst wrecks in the history of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Railroad occurred at Ridgeway. and Pittsburg Railroad occurred at Bidgeway. Elk county, early this morning. The blunder of a train despatcher resulted in a collision between two freight trains. Both engines and thirty-five cars were totally demolished, with a less of about $40 000. The trains were going at a high rate of a speed, but happened to meet on a straight track and the trainmen impedand were uninjured. Both trains were renning at the rate of thirty miles an hour.
